Especially tailored for nonprofit and community based organization staff, practitioners, community corrections staff, workforce development professionals, policy makers, criminal justice staff, lawyers, judges, law enforcement agencies, churches and schools.

Mr. Michael Leonard has an extensive background in New York City related to adult and juvenile offenders. He has a lot of experience with youth, gangs and criminal justice issues. His services are sought by criminal justice agencies throughout the country and he also trains people of all ages and in all walks of life regarding security risk groups.

As one teacher noted, "Mr. Leonard opened our eyes to the reality of what can surround our youth and helped us become aware of the dangers our students can be exposed to."

He is a dynamic presenter and holds training sessions for government agencies, police department, schools, educational institutes, churches and non-profit groups especially those with youth based programs. His personal story has been featured in several books and he has written his own book, "Youth, Gangs and God: Why Are Our Children Dying to Join Gangs?"

"Saving lives" is Michael Leonard's mission and one way to interrupt the direction of gang-involved youth is to provide knowledge to those working directly with our community's children and adolescents. Contact Mr. Leonard to arrange a training workshop, conference or seminar for your group or organization.
